B-285653 system source codes and ability to implement local changes to programs used to process claims, that do not effectively prevent activities possibly leading to improper payments. The use of incorrect billing codes is a problem faced both by public and Voluminous and Changing private health insurers. Medicare pays Part B providers a fee for each Billing Codes Can covered medical service identified by the American Medical Associations Contribute to Inappropriate uniformly accepted coding system, called the physicians Current Payments Procedural Terminology (CPT). To be able to describe so many different services, the coding system is voluminous and undergoes annual changes. As a result, physicians and other providers may have difficulty identifying the codes that most accurately reflect the services and products provided. Not only can this lead providers to inadvertently submit improperly coded claims, it can make it easier for unscrupulous individuals to deliberately abuse the billing system. Due to the huge number of claims processed, the integrity of the program, in part, relies on providers (1) being knowledgeable of proper billing procedures and (2) only claiming medically necessary and covered services or supplies that were actually provided to eligible beneficiaries. The programs vulnerabilities have been compounded by the emergence of Fraud Schemes Are Diverse organized groups of criminals who defraud and abuse Medicare. This has and Vary in Complexity led to an array of fraudulent schemes that are diverse and vary in complexity. For example, based on our recent review of seven investigations of fraud or...
