Not illustrated. 1921 Excerpt: .A formula that has been used for some time as fixing the upper limits of speed is as follows:  $r = \frac{V}{H} \sqrt{hp}$ , where  $H$  equals head acting on the turbine and  $hp$  equals the maximum horsepower of the turbine. The formula applies to a single runner, and in the case of multi-runner units the maximum horsepower of the unit is to be divided by the number of runners and the horsepower per runner substituted in the formula. There is probably no other feature in the design of a hydro-electric plant that has received more discussion than the question of the unit's speed. There are several contending forces: The electrical engineer desires usually the higher speeds in order to cheapen the cost and frequently increase the efficiency of the generator. On the other hand, the waterwheel designer usually prefers his lower speed for better emergency throughout and, certainly, for higher efficiency at lower or part gate loads and for freedom from troubles in the field, such as pitting, erosion and vibration. The size of waterwheel units has steadily increased to such a point that now the cost of the generators does not Abstract of paper presented at the Annual and Pacific Coast Convention of the A. I. E.
